Where the New Trail May Wind

Feb. 1

The route selected for the next annual Trail Ride is left to the decision of a Trail Committee which this year has had to face a number of problems.

Previous to the war there was a wide variety of choice, as it was possible to select a starting point at a considerable distance from Banff, where the horses could be kept waiting in a corral for trail riders who arrived by bus or car. The shortage of gas and rubber created by the war limited such supplementary travel to the railway in 1942, and so our starting point was Castle Mountain.

The same limitation will govern the Trail Ride of 1943. We must also arrange to have the Pow-Wow in Banff, as a large number of old timers and others interested in trail riding like to be present at the finale, and this year are prevented from travelling any distance to lend their support.

Rich in Scenic Color

At the Council Meeting held at Banff in June, 1942, a route suggested by Jim Brewster and illustrated in this Bulletin found the highest favour, provided the necessary new trail could be cut. This route follows a familiar trail up Brewster Creek, then rises to the Simpson Summit up an old Indian Trail on Fatigue Pass, then drops down to Eohippus Lake, so named by A. O. Wheeler for the Geographic Board of Canada. We had a glimpse of this beautiful lake on our Trail Ride of 1942.

Then we rise again to cross Simpson Pass and ride through the Bourgeau Range over a pass known as Harvey Pass, to drop down into the Bow Valley. The scenery on the fourth day of this route is described by those who have traversed it as comprising one of the most magnificent panoramas in the Canadian Rockies.

The advantages of this route are that it opens up new territory close to Banff, that it can be ridden on horseback all the way, that no day's ride exceeds 14 miles, and that the trail begins and ends in Banff.

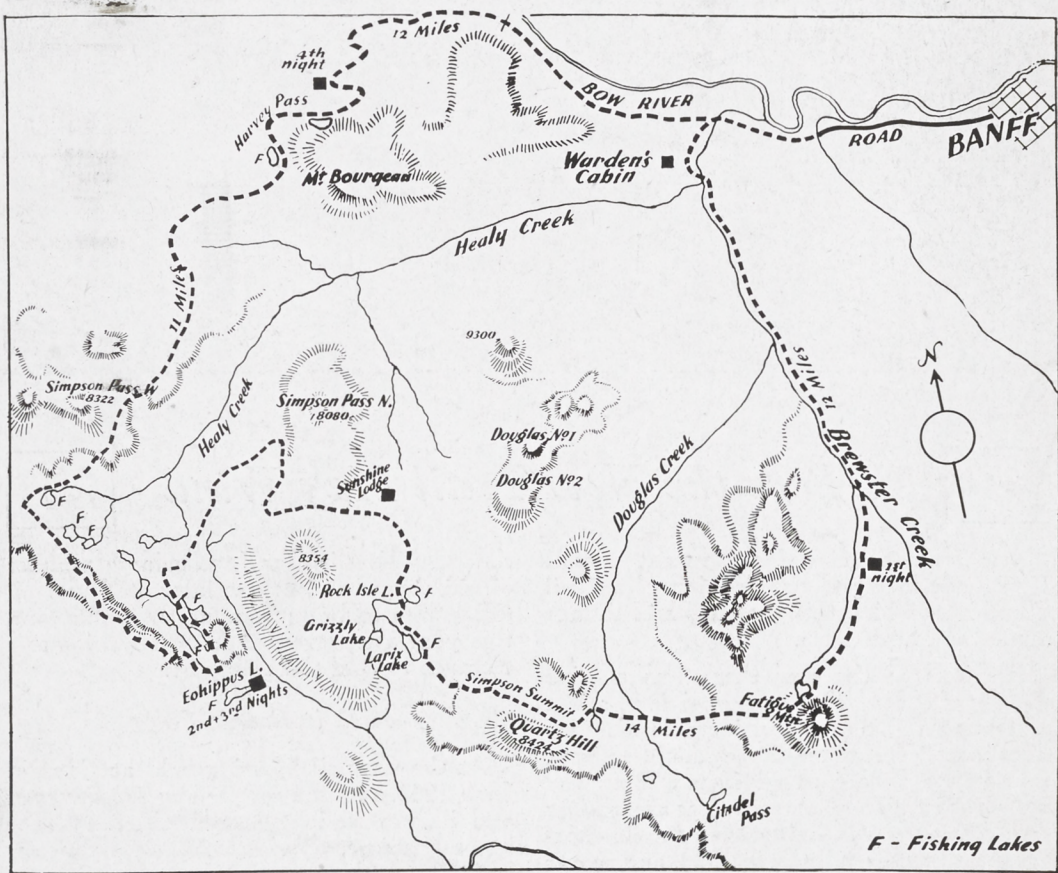

Alternative Routes Suggested

Authority was given by Ottawa to the Superintendent of the Banff National Park to cut the necessary new trail last fall, but owing to the demand for labor for the harvest coming on the top of army enlistments, it was not found possible to do this sort of work before snow fell. If weather conditions are favourable in the spring and early summer, the new trail along this route may be cut in time for the Trail Ride, but this will not be known till June.

Anticipating such possibilities, Major Jennings suggested six alternative routes to which another was added by Superintendent Horsey of the Yoho National Park. These have been under consideration by the Trail Committee, but are not detailed in this Bulletin to avoid confusion.

Members, however, can rest assured that in the event of Jim Brewster's proposed route not being available, we have plenty of alternatives for our regular five-day Trail Ride, which will be held as usual on the last week-end of July, viz. July 30th to August 3rd of 1943.

Saddlebags for Suitcases

As reviewed by J. M. Gibbon

In Bulletin 61 (February 1941), Mary Bosanquet, an adventurous English trail rider, gave a brief sketch of her ride across Canada from Vancouver to Montreal. Now she has found a publisher for a full length book about that ride, and a fascinating book it is. "Saddlebags for Suitcases" is the title and publishers are McClelland and Stewart for Canada, and Dodd, Mead and Co. for the United States.

Mary Bosanquet jumps into her story without telling us much about herself, but as the story unfolds we find more about her. All Gaul, said Caesar, is divided into three parts, and this trail rider is a mixture of dryad, centaurette and girl in slacks with a gift for poetry.

Vivid Picture of Canadian Life

They called her foolhardy, but she had the stuff of adventure in her which would have taken her round the world over the North and South Poles if that had been in her mind. Some one better at arithmetic than this reviewer could count up the number of proposals she got as she jogged across the Rockies and the prairies and the wilderness north of the Great Lakes. Another mathematician might be able to figure the total of just friends she made, whose hospitality she enjoyed in what she found to be a country of warm hearts and open doors. There have been travel books by the thousand about Canada — written by explorers and fur-traders and Pullman car passengers and motor tourists, but none has given a more vivid picture of the life of the people and particularly of the country folk.

The trail led through Southern B. C. into the Doukhobor country and by way of the Kootenays up to the Rockies over Vermilion Pass. Rain and snow in high passes could not daunt this adventurous spirit. Bears, deer and a timber wolf added variety to the life along the trail. Banff and Lake Louise were evidently rather too sophisticated for this trail rider, but she found the loneliness she liked at Lake Minnewanka (too early for the tourists) and Ghost River. A highlight was the visit to the Calgary Stampede.

The prairies were monotonous after the mountains, Saskatchewan was burnt up with drought ("lands that wait for water", she calls them), but the people of so many varied racial origins were fascinating.

Hazards on Highways

The most dangerous parts of her ride were not on the trail but on the highways, which she had sometimes perforce to use, as for instance between Brandon and Winnipeg, on which:

"Cars come racing past, so close and so fast that the horse's manes are wrenched over their flanks by the rush of air; or another time a great, silent limousine will come gliding up behind, and then, just as it is drawing level with the horse's quarters, let loose a piercing hoot; or else a car-load of well-meaning youngsters will come racketing towards us, honking and waving their arms like a distracted windmill."

Most dangerous of all was the neighbourhood of a railway with "a freight train hooting its forlorn Canadian whistle, and flapping a blanket of white smoke across the road."

Melts Mountie's Eyes

The coming of winter prevented even Mary Bosanquet from completing her cross-continent ride in one summer, so she "dropped anchor" near Sault Ste. Marie. There she had her first and only accident, resulting eventually in a lengthened stay at a delightful farm in West Dayton. Here her only unpleasant experience was the rumour that had spread around to the effect that she was a German spy — this reduced the number of her partners at the local dances, and eventually brought the Mounted Police on her trail — not on horseback but in "a shiny motor car" to investigate. He was a beautifully groomed young man who came from a village near Cambridge, where she had often stayed, and found that her father was high up in the British Consular Service. She had just come out of a pool in a shady creek —

"So we sat and talked of Cambridge, while the water trickled in patterns down my muddy legs, and the young man looked at me seriously with his melting eyes."

So ended the spy stories; and eventually Mary Bosanquet, with Jonty, one of her faithful horse companions, reached Montreal as she had set out to do. Timothy had been left in Algoma. Indeed she added to her mileage with a trail ride to New York "through Harlem, through the Bronx, down the narrow length of Central Park, down Eighth Avenue and into the Mounted Police Barracks on Forty-eighth Street.

TRAIL RIDING BEST REMEDY

"The best prescription for the inside of a man is the outside of a horse!"

This time-honored phrase can be aptly applied to the Trail Riders — particularly in times of war when the importance of physical fitness cannot be over-estimated.

"Civilians as well as those in the armed forces need furloughs". This fact was strongly emphasized by Marshall H. Diverty in the course of his presidential address last summer.

And to quote Mr. Diverty further, "where can a more profitably healthful vacation be spent than amid these peaks, lakes, forests and streams?" This refers, of course, to the idyllic territory covered by the Trail Riders on their 1942 expedition.

"The outside of a horse" as a prescription for renewed energies does not mean a choice cut of equine steak. It refers to the beneficial jogging motion produced by a horse on the walk, trot or gallop. When it comes to setting the blood a-tingle and relaxing the nerves, there's just no better remedy.

With practically every civilian feeling the increased pressure of wartime demands, the necessity for a respite, no matter how brief, has never been more important.

War work — whether it be confined to office, lecture room, factory or home, calls for alert mentalities and sound bodies.

Five days with the Trail Riders of the Canadian Rockies all but guarantee these requisites.

A Gold Button for "Dusty"

by H. Travers Coleman

It is time, as the Hon. Bertram Sliggelsby once sagely remarked in the House of Commons during debate on the well-remembered Bill to Control the Outbreak of Hog Cholera in Upper Tootington-on-Thames, it is time for us to take stock, to put our shoulders to the wheel, pull in our belts, get behind each other and look ourselves in the face!

Never did a Sliggelsby come closer to a true statement of the facts. In his masterful fashion this scion of a valued and ancient line got to the very marrow of the thing, throwing aside the verbiage and idle chatter which theretofore had so obscured the real issue behind the spread of this painful malady.

We of the Trail Riders find ourselves faced with the issue. The chips are down or as, I think it was Mr. Smokey McNutt once put it, away up there by Mount Assiniboine, we've got to put up or shut up.

In other words, Trail Riders, how long is it going to be before we formally present to Dusty, Claude Brewster's game if ancient collie, a button of the Order which will suitably recognize his outstanding contributions to trail riding in the Rockies?

How many of us have seen Dusty, limping along behind his master, leaping over rocks, scrambling along the shale, or knee deep in glacial snows? We have seen him climbing arduous switchbacks, looking down courageously from precipices which make the stoutest hearts give pause, covering his miles without griping or complaint, but always at some personal discomfort.

The truth is — Dusty is getting old. How many more miles he'll "ride" the trails with us is very doubtful. Meanwhile, what are we doing to honor this sagacious and sturdy canine?

A brisk jurisdictional dispute has arisen between the Trail Riders and our kindred organization, the Sky Line Trail Hikers of the Canadian Rockies, a dispute which ill-befits two such fine organizations dedicated to the common aim of making our Rockies more accessible. Some of the Trail Riders, wishing to avoid the trifling expense of providing a button for Dusty, have taken shelter behind a snide technicality. They argue that Dusty does not ride but walks the trails. It is up to the Sky Line Hikers, they say, to make Dusty a member of their Order.

Dan McCowan, western secretary of the Trail Hikers, with laudable and characteristic "canniness" and fine regard for the state of the treasury, has neatly side-stepped the issue, on the ground that Dusty does not accompany the Hikers and is exclusively the property of the Riders.

There are two camps and the battle soon will be joined. What side are you on? Nations have sprung to war over issues less vital than this. Are we going to face the issue like men, and do the right thing for Dusty, regardless of hair-splitting technicalities or will it be said in later years to our shame that Dusty passed from our campfires to his ultimate and just-earned rest, without being made an honorary member of our group?

What do you think, dear reader?

The effectiveness of luring Rocky Mountain snipe to their doom after dark by waving a flashlight and beating a tin pan is still being pondered by a pair of would-be nimrods from Toronto and Frankfort, Ont. Though returning empty-handed, the applause that greeted the stalwart pair at Egypt Lake more than repaid their efforts. How about it, Jack and Pat?

TRAIL RIDER AT NINE

It's a long jump from the cradle to the saddle of a mountain pony, but nine-year-old Peter MacCarthy of St. Louis, Mo. survived the transition with flying colors.

Today Peter is the youngest member of the Trail Riders of the Canadian Rockies to wear the society's handsome bronze button. And that means at least 50 miles of more or less continuous equine mileage on Rocky Mountain trails in Jasper Park.

It was last summer that Peter set out to earn the bronze button. From July 24th to August 3rd the hooves of his trusty mountain pony shuffled off no less than 70 miles of rugged mountain terrain—20 miles more than the button actually called for!

But Peter's riding experience goes considerably farther back than last summer. According to his father, John D. MacCarthy of St. Louis, Peter started riding soon after he learned to walk. Today riding is his favorite hobby.

With the exception of two summers (including the one he was born) Peter has spent all his summer vacations in the Rockies with his parents.

It took nothing short of a trip to Honolulu in 1939 to keep Peter out of the saddle during the second summer, but he made up for this absence during subsequent sorties over the skyline trails.

Today he actually knows more about Rocky Mountain bridle paths than many a trail riding grown-up... and he's still looking for new trails to conquer.

It might be reasonable to assume that the Rockies' rugged trails might prove a bit hard on so youthful an equestrian—but not for Peter. This enterprising young rider enjoyed every minute of last year's ride (his father affirms this) and experienced his only difficulty on a sheet of ice extending some fifty or sixty feet.

At one point on the ride the spell of the Rockies staged an-all out assault on Peter's nine-year-old imagination. "Is Heaven like this?" he asked his mother as they reached the summit of a skyward pass and a sea of snow-covered peaks spread out before his eyes.

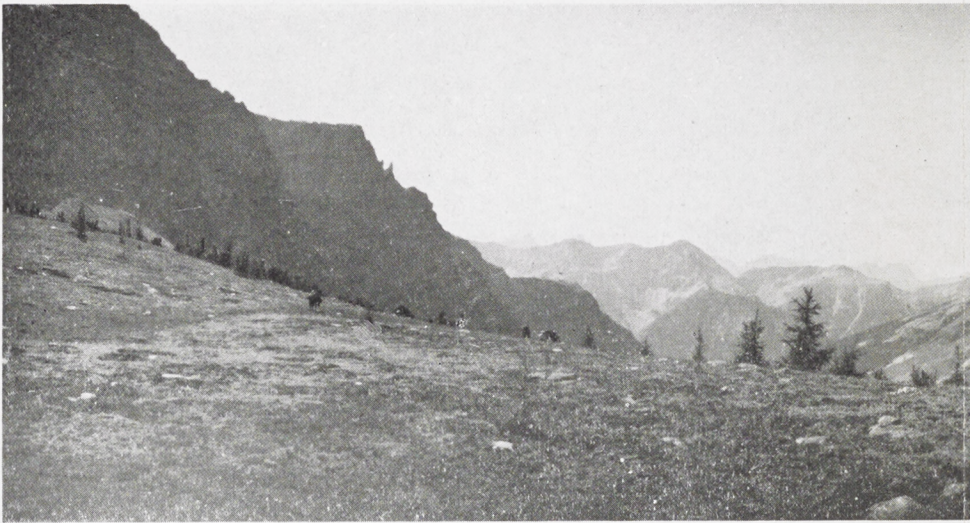

There are, of course, hundreds of good Trail Riders who hope it is.

"Just Between Us Nags"

by Graham Nichols

Drawing by R. H. Palenske

SCENE: The corral at Egypt Lake. Three horses — Duchess, Nellie, and Daisy — are discussing the day's ride.

Duch: Well, I'm glad that's over. Another mile on Whistling Pass would have finished me... mighty tough on the manicure too. And that snow — imagine snow in mid-July. Sometimes it makes you wish you were a trail rider instead of a horse.

Nell: Sure it was a tough climb, but what do you expect at 8,000-foot altitudes — sawdust bridle paths? And they do stop us for a breather every now and then. We have no kick coming.

Dai: You get all the breaks anyhow. Didn't your dude get off and walk every time the going got really tough? Well mine wasn't that kind of a guy. He just stayed on and admired the scenery. I saw plenty of scenery too — along the ground.

Duch: So what? I wish my boss had stayed in the saddle. The way he stumbled ahead of me with those lines in his hand nearly drove me nuts. Sometimes he'd stop so suddenly I'd nearly run him down. Once I ended up with my chin resting on his shoulder. Gosh, was I embarrassed!

Nell: Well things should be better next year anyway. Did you hear about Trav Coleman's new deal? His idea is to get the trail riders to carry us horses during the two-days after layover. Oh boy! can you imagine Carl Rungius taking you in his arms?

Dai: Sounds too good to be true. Besides, I don't think the Executive will approve. After all, the idea is hardly in keeping with the Articles of the Constitution.

Duch: It is a bit revolutionary at that. And besides that boy Trav Coleman gets some pretty screwy ideas at times. Did you hear about that article "Horses ees Nots" he's preparing for the next edition of the Trail Rider magazine? The editor said he'll be glad to run it — if he's short of space.

Dai: Still, I'm all in favor of the fellow if he's trying to give us nags a break. I hear Marshall Diverty is our new president. Maybe he'll second Trav's idea. Nice fellow, Marsh; ever have him in the saddle?

Duch: Once, at Banff Springs Hotel, I think it was; swell fellow alright, and does he know his horses! Has a smart looking daughter too, name's Jane — Janey with the dark brown hair, I suppose.

Nell: By the way, speaking about dark brown hair, did you two equines hear about Indian Tom's elopement.

Duch: No; give us the low-down.

Nell: Remember last night when the gang staged the break from Twin Lakes corral? And this morning did you see Graham Nichols turning the corral upside down looking for his horse? No wonder he couldn't find the animal. By that time Indian Tom (that was Graham's horse) was about 10 miles back on the trail to Castle Mountain with that glamor horse of Olive Hanley's.

Dai: So Indian Tom decided to lead Primrose to the halter, eh? Well, well.

Nell: This is no punning matter. They haven't shown up yet, and Claude Brewster's fit to be tied. A few others made a break for it too.

Lectures on Outdoor life in Canada by Mr. Dan McCowan, Vice-president of the Trail Riders and prominent Canadian naturalist, will be delivered to members of the Canadian Armed Services throughout the current year. At the request of the National War Services Committee of the Y.M.C.A. Mr. McCowan has been granted a year's leave from the Canadian Pacific Railway to carry out this enterprise. His lecture tours will take him to Training Centres in Canada, Newfoundland, Labrador and Alaska. He may fill similar engagements in the United Kingdom later in the year.

Between War Whoops at Egypt Lake

Duch: I don't see why Claude should get all burned up about it. After all, why shouldn't Indian Tom elope if he wants too? Just because his gal happened to say "Yes" at that particular time doesn't mean a thing. Heck, wouldn't you walk out on a trail ride under those conditions?

Nell: Maybe I would. But if I'd been Claude I'd have shipped them both to the nearest glue factory. As it was they had to take Tiger out of the pack shift and put him in Indian Tom's place... and with Indian Tom's equipment on that runty little rowan. Gosh he looked funny.

Dai: Personally I think it was a nice break for Tiger. Saddle work's a cinch after dunnage duty. Anyhow, Tiger was getting an inferiority complex — kept wondering why he never got a promotion.

Nell: Well, I have nothing against the poor animal myself. And he did take a heck of a lot of ribbing about his size — or rather, his lack of it. All that stuff about him falling down a gopher hole, living in a kennel, and getting the horse laugh from Fred Laidlaw as well.

Duch: Yes, and that wasn't the half of it. Did you see what was riding him? That guy looked as though he'd never been on a horse in his life. I heard he tried to bribe Tiger with a lump of sugar. Sugar may go over with those sissy horses down east, but give me a good mouthful of alpine hay any day.

Nell: He couldn't have been much worse than my dude. Couldn't even get into the saddle without two or three preliminary tries. Then he had a heck of a job getting me started. I knew what he wanted to do of course. But it's fun to keep 'em guessing.

Dai: Aw, why not give the poor guy a break — let him think he's boss. And try to keep a straight face when he pulls a boner. He looks like a good enough guy.

Nell: Sure, I'd never give him the well known roll or dunk him in the middle of Healy Creek. But after all, a horse has to have a bit of fun these days. Dan McCowan says its good for the morale.

Duch: Shucks, we have plenty of fun without resorting to those foalish gags. Anyway compare our lot with our unlucky pals who end up in glue factories or as a table d'hote attraction on a fox farm menu.

Nell: No we can't squawk. But I still hope Trav's idea goes through. The least they can do is let us lay over at layover camp. Doesn't it ever occur to them that we might like to listen in on those sing-songs too?

Duch: And sit around the camp fire and drink hot chocolate, too, I suppose.

Nell: Now you're being funny. The corral's good enough for me any day. I used to be ambitious in the old days. But that was before the Brewsters signed me up. Had all kinds of big ideas. Now I'm kinda glad I'm on the trail ride staff. And it's not every horse that gets his picture drawn by "Pal" Palenske.

Dai: And think of the fun we have putting those greenhorn dudes through their paces. Gosh, the look on some of those dudes' faces when you swing into a gallop! And think of the swell horses you meet on an outing of this kind.

Duch: And don't forget the preview of trail ride fashions we see every year.

Dai: Meaning moose-hide jackets?

Duch: Not necessarily; look at the Tom Beals, for instance. They get their stuff direct from Hollywood — or near there. And Marg Francis with that umpteen gallon Stetson. As for Jean Stewart — looks as though she'd stepped from the pages of a western thriller.

Dai: Yes, we couldn't be attached to a better bunch of guys and gals. And this isn't such a bad corral... even though it is Egypt Lake and not Seebe.

Duch: Apparently Stubbs seems to think so too. Look at that shameless nag rolling over on his back — waving his legs too. How undignified. Of course, what do you expect from a horse whose father pulled a milk wagon.

Nell: Still you've got to admit that a roll feels mighty good after all that saddle equipment has been slipped off your back. Think I'll follow suit. Here goes...

Dai: Me too; look out below!

Duch: Go right ahead... I'm going to grab a few rounds of shut-eye. Sweet dreams — and I don't mean night-mares.

TROPHY — DEADLINE ADVANCED

For the benefit of more leisurely candidates, the deadline for submitting photographs to the Townsend Trophy contest has been extended to March 1st instead of February 1st as originally scheduled.

This should give all contestants a chance to get their photographic efforts before the judges in time to compete for that coveted silver cup, presented annually by Reginald Townsend of New York City and one of our Charter Members.

Three competent critics, none of whom is a Trail Rider, name the winner of the contest which is open to all participants of last year's Trail Ride, regardless of their photographic experience or qualifications.

Contestants are reminded to have their photographs printed on glossy paper, not larger than 8 by 10 inches, and to have their name included in a sealed envelope and nom de plume on the outside.

Photographs should be sent (not later than March 1) to the Secretary Treasurer, Trail Riders of the Canadian Rockies, Room 318, Windsor Station, Montreal, P.Q., Canada.

HOARY MARMOT? — Guess Again!

Imagine waking out of a sound slumber and finding this staring you in the face! Well, Carl Rungius did — and he's still pondering the creature's challenging remarks.

As for the beastie's identity, your guess is as good as ours. Perchance it played the leading role in a surrealist's bad dream. Or maybe it's something a gay reveller saw (or thought he saw) on New Year's Eve.

We do know this, however — it was created by Canada's trail riding cameraman, Nick Morant. We also know that Nick pinned the drawing to Carl's pillow while the latter was enjoying the sleep of the just in the berth of a sleeping car. Nick, we are told, was a fellow passenger.

Chances are that Carl received a temporary jolt when his awakening eyes focussed themselves on the fantastic monster. Perhaps he momentarily resolved to abandon the practice of eating lobster à la Newburg before retiring.
